
McHale is Listening

Jock McHale didn't coach his Magpie players in the1930 grand final against Geelong. McHale was home in bed with the flu. At half-time, Mr Rush told the Collingwood players that their coach would be listening at home on the radio. Read the summary of the 1930 grand final in the back of Side by Side, Shoulder to Shoulder and, if you need to, conduct research about the game and the players that took part. Write a section of play of the 1930 season decider as if you are commentating the action. After you have written your section of play comes the fun part! Read your description of the action, sounding just like a commentator, to an audience.
